CROUP AT MIDNIGHT; WELL IN MORNING

"A few nights ago one of my patrons had a small child taken with croup about midnight," writes M. T. Davis, Bearsville, W. Va. "They came to my store and got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. Before morning the child was entirely recovered. The father's name is C. C. Craven." Isn't it wise to experiment with unknown cough medicines when you can get the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar? Best for coughs, colds, croup and laryngitis. Jo Anderson, Druggist, Chattanooga, Tenn. (Adv.)

IN THE ARMY YOU NEED "PEP"

"What is the one thing a man needs most to be a good soldier?" a colonel of the regulars was asked recently. "Pep," he said. "Plenty of vim, vigor and vitality—a man that feels so good that he's always looking for more to do instead of trying to get out of what he has to do. The fellow with lots of go will get higher up."

And what's good for the army is good for civil life. Without correct breathing there can be no great vigor—no "pep." One great aid to breathing is to open the nose with Menth-Alba, a pure white cream, which lubricates the nose, always swelling, removes incrustations, heals the mucous membrane and enables one to take deep draughts of fresh air, the oxygen of which burns up impurities of the system, thereby removing the poisons that have been causing sluggishness. A little Menth-Alba does a mighty lot of good and it costs only a quarter at drug stores, or send to Spurluck-Neal Company, Nashville, Tenn., for free sample. (Adv.)

SEES BUT ONE WAY TO END WAR

London, Jan. 19.—Addressing the final conference of the representatives of the trades unions as affected by the manpower bill, which passed the house of commons Thursday night, David Lloyd George, the British prime minister, last night gave the government's reasons for the necessity of raising more men for the army and referred at length to his own speech and that of President Wilson regarding the war aims of the entente allies and the United States.

After thanking the representatives for the spirit in which they had met the government, the premier said there was no other alternative for raising men, except either by raising the military age or of sending the wounded men back again to the firing line.

"You have either got to put your whole strength into it or just do what is done in the Russian army, and tell those brave fellows that they can go home whenever they like and no one will stop them."

"Believe me, if there are men who say they will not go into the trenches, then the men who are in the trenches have a right to say 'Neither will we remain here.'"

"Suppose our men should leave the trenches. Would that end the war? Yes, it would, but what sort of an end? When the Russians ceased to fight, the British and the French simply talked. We want principles with our German army, did the German army retreat? No, they took Riga and the islands. Fraternization did not prevent their marching forward. If Petrograd had been nearer, they would have taken it also. Resolutions Not Enough in Themselves.

"The channel ports are not so far from the fighting line, and unless we are prepared to stand up with croup about midnight," writes M. T. Davis, Bearsville, W. Va. "They came to my store and got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. Before morning the child was entirely recovered. The father's name is C. C. Craven." Isn't it wise to experiment with unknown cough medicines when you can get the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar? Best for coughs, colds, croup and laryngitis. Jo Anderson, Druggist, Chattanooga, Tenn. (Adv.)

"What sort of terms do you think we would get from Von Hindenburg if we said to him, 'We want you to give up Belgium.' He would say, 'In his heart, 'You cannot turn me out of Belgium with trade union resolutions.'"

"But I will tell you the answer you can give him. 'We can and will turn you out of Belgium, and with trade union guns and with trade unionists behind them.' They have broken his line already, and if we endure with the spirit of our fathers and the spirit that has made the greatness of this land, its power, its prestige and its honor, we shall yet be able to carry to conviction, to carry to triumph, to carry to reality, to carry to an essential part of the story of this world the great aim that you in your own language, that the government in its language and President Wilson in his noble language have been proclaiming in the last few days has overlong survived the failure of its adherents to be ready to die for it."

Must Fight It Through.
"Last night this measure was carried in the house of commons without a dissenting voice. Democracy, put in plain terms, is government by a majority of the people. If one profession, one trade, one section or one class in a community claims to be immune from obligations which are imposed upon the rest, that is a fundamental travesty of the principles of the democracy—that is the setting up of a new autocracy. You and I in the past have been fighting against privilege. I hope we shall be fighting on the same side again. We are fighting now against privilege claimed by a military caste. Democracy, if it means anything, must mean that the people of all classes, all sections, all trades and all professions must merge their privileges and their rights in common stock."

A voice—"A wealth!"

"Certainly," replied the premier, who continued: "If any man standing in my place can find a just way out of this conflict without fighting through, for heaven's sake let him tell me. My own conviction is this—the people either must go on or go under. A great number of questions were put to the premier by the delegates regarding the advisability of entering into peace negotiations or the permitting of a conference at Stockholm. Mr. Lloyd George, in replying, said: "Germany always has been ready for peace at her own price, but that is not a price that we are prepared to pay. The moment the Germans show a disposition to negotiate a peace on equitable terms, and they are the terms the labor party itself has in substance adopted, there will be no reluctance to enter into peace negotiations."

Only Recognize German People's Envoys.

The premier's objection to a conference at Stockholm or elsewhere was that delegates of the German government would be chosen. A delegate here interjected: "Not necessarily." Mr. Lloyd George replied to this:

"Do not let us deceive ourselves with delusions. You can only make peace with a government. If the government does not represent the people, let them change their government."

In the same breath the premier challenged his audience to change their own government if it dissatisfied a delegate called out: "Give us an opportunity."

Mr. Lloyd George resumed: "We have given you the best opportunity because we introduced a franchise bill adding 8,000,000 to the electorate. You can have your opportunity whenever you like; it is not the government that shrinks from it."

Then he was asked whether, if the Germans decided on a government similar to the present Russian government, England would recognize their representatives.

Mr. Lloyd George replied: "We will recognize the representatives of any government set up by the German people."

REASON GERMANY EXTENDS BARRED ZONE

Berlin Papers Believe She Seeks to Prevent America Establishing Assembling Points.

Amsterdam, Jan. 19.—The recent extension of Germany of the barred zone to the waters around the Azores and Cape Verde Islands is presumed by Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin in a recent issue to be due to the possibility that they might serve as assembling points for American troops, transports and supply ships, while good harbors and useful cable stations on a part of the African mainland were also included in the zone for the same reason.

The newspaper expresses the expectation that from the new extension of the zone, will come a weakening of the effort of Germany's enemies because of the necessity of spreading the anti-U-boat defense measures over a much larger area.

K. Season, president of the Georgia Landowners' Association, at the fifty-fourth annual convention of the National Wool Growers' association here yesterday.

The importance to the world of the sheep industry was stressed by a number of speakers, and Dr. Issa Tanimura, Japanese commissioner of livestock, told the sheepmen that because of the embargo on wool from Australia Japan looks to the United States for its supply.

Land for raising sheep was offered to the members of the association by Leo C. Harmon, president of the upper peninsula department bureau of Michigan.

PRESIDENT WILSON IN SUPPORT FUEL ORDER

Washington, Jan. 19.—In his statement supporting Dr. Garfield's issuance of the closing order, President Wilson says he was consulted and fully agreed with the fuel administrator as to its necessity.

The president's statement follows: "I was, of course, consulted by Mr. Garfield before the fuel order of Thursday was issued, and fully agreed with him that it was necessary, much as I regretted the necessity. This war calls for many sacrifices, and sacrifices of the sort called for by this order are infinitely less than sacrifices of life which might otherwise be involved. It is absolutely necessary to get the ships away, it is absolutely necessary to relieve the congestion at the ports, and upon the railways it is absolutely necessary to move great quantities of food, and it is absolutely necessary that our people should be warmed in their homes, if nowhere else, and half-way measures would not have accomplished the desired ends."

"If action such as this had not been taken, we should have limped along from day to day with a slowly improving condition of affairs with regard to the shipment of food and coal, but without such immediate relief as had become absolutely necessary because of the congestion of traffic which has been piling up for the last few months."

"I have every confidence that the result of action of this sort will justify it, and that the people of the country will loyally and patriotically respond to necessities of this kind as they have to every other sacrifice involved in the war. We are upon a war footing, and I am confident that the people of the United States are willing to observe the same sort of discipline that might be involved in the actual conflict itself."

Avoiding the Rush Hours

The curve in the right-hand corner of the illustration shows approximately the fluctuations of telephone calls at a central office in the average busy city. The high spots represent the rush hours for which additional operators and adequate equipment must always be ready.

To get easier hauls, the railroad engineer lowers grades and straightens curves, cutting through hills and filling valleys.

If the telephone traffic curve could be flattened by distributing a percentage of calls over less busy periods, it would effect a material saving and assist us to meet the extraordinary demands for telephone service.

Important business calls cannot be deferred, but there are many calls, social and less urgent, which might be made at other times without loss to the subscriber.

By avoiding these high spots in telephone traffic, generally speaking, around ten o'clock in the morning and three o'clock in the afternoon, and by making telephone calls of a social or less urgent nature before or after these rush hours, the telephone user will be co-operating with us in the patriotic service we are rendering the Government and help us to meet the constantly increasing demands for telephone service.
